FEUDAL LAW REIGNS IN KENTUCKY

SHERIFF UNABLE TO HALT NEW OUTBREAK OF CLAN SHOOTINGS

Vengeance Promised As Four Slain In Church Yard Fight

LONDON, Ky., Jan. 18.—The law of the courts and the statute books today yielded to the unwritten law of the feud. Sheriff Harve Steele confessed himself powerless to cope with Kentucky's latest outbreak of the traditional war of clans. In fact, the official admitted he expected more gunfire in this newest feud between the Crooks and the Johnson families, which has already cost four lives and placed two of the feudists in hospitals with serious wounds.

The dead were buried yesterday in the churchyard at New Salem, where the gun battle was fought. Sheriff Steele revealed that he had assumed the office of peacemaker, but had abandoned his efforts when both families refused to terminate hostilities.

The sheriff went to the Crooks home and there pleaded with "ma," 70-year-old head of the family, for a promise that there would be no more shooting.

"Harve," said the aged hill-woman, "I can't give you my word. My boys are coming home."

She referred to her four remaining sons who came to New Salem from their homes in Cincinnati and Hazard to attend the funeral of their brother, Homer, 32, and Forrest, 30, who were killed when the Crooks and Johnsons shot it out in the New Salem churchyard Saturday.

In the Johnson clan the two who died were "Big Henry," 35, and his brother Earl, 25. "Little Henry" Johnson, 21, a first cousin of the dead brothers, was in a hospital in a dying condition from wounds. Willie Johnson, 17-year-old brother of the slain men, was also suffering from bullet wounds.

Willie was declared to be the cause of the feud. The "Crookses" accused him of having wronged a girl member of their family, Ruby.

BOULDER WRECKS TRAIN; NONE HURT

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 18.—Scores of passengers were imperiled early today when the locomotive of a fast Pittsburgh-to-Buffalo express train of the Pennsylvania Railroad plowed into a boulder on the tracks, near Freeport, and was derailed, burying its nose into a soft embankment.

No one was injured in the derailment, officials of the road here reported.

The boulder rolled into the tracks from a steep hillside overlooking the right of way near the station, trainmen said. After striking the boulder the locomotive ran on about 1200 feet at a reduced speed and was derailed at a switch.

The baggage car and coaches of the train were shunted to the southbound tracks and proceeded to Buffalo after an hour and a half delay, railroad officials reported.

BANDITS GET $2,000 IN THEATER HOLDUP

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 18.—Highways throughout Ohio were watched today by two bandits who staged a daring robbery of the Orpheum Theater boxoffice during a rush hour yesterday evening and escaped in an automobile bearing Michigan license tags with $2,000 loot.

While a crowd thronged the lobby of the theater, the bandits forced Joseph Cone, ticket seller, to open the safe which they rifled of the theater's Saturday and Sunday receipts. After warning Cone that a third member of their gang was watching to see that they made their escape, the pair calmly walked away.

CLEARING HOUSE MAY AID TEACHERS

DAYTON, O., Jan. 18.—Hopes of arranging a loan of from $100,000 to $150,000 to meet the teachers' payroll Friday, members of the Dayton Board of Education were to meet today with the Dayton Clearing House Association.

Only one-fourth of the amount of the teachers' payroll is on hand now, but school board officials expressed confidence that a loan would be secured to tide over until the school system receives its partial payment from the January tax settlement.

CIRCUS WORLD MOURNS TILLY

Veteran And Beloved Elephant Widely Known Under "Big Top" Is Dead

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 18.—Followers of the sawdust trail under "the big top,"—the clowns, the fat ladies, the high-hatted ring-masters and even ex-waterboys—today paid their last respects to "Tilly," one of the most widely known circus elephants in the world.

"Tilly," who was 120 years old and the last of a long line of East Indian elephants, according to John G. Robinson, her owner, died yesterday following a short illness from an intestinal disorder. She will be buried today following funeral services on the Robinson estate at Terrace Park here.

Hailed as the most capable performing elephant in the world, "Tilly's" career was marked with records of heroic deeds and remarkable achievements, probably the greatest of which was when she subdued "Chief," a bad actor who killed his trainer in Charlotte, N. C., several years ago and threw the town in hysterics by starting to run wild down the streets.

"Tilly" chased the bad actor, knocked him down and virtually sat on him until he could be chained.

"Tilly" was also the heroine of an occasion in 1902 when a string of circus cars broke loose at Indiana, Pa., and careened down the track several miles before being derailed. The elephant averted a panic by propping herself against a car keeping it from overturning.

WANTS TO DIE

"I want to die." That is what Francine Dowd, motion picture actress, kept repeating as she hovered between life and death in a New York hospital after taking poison in her apartment. Friends could ascribe no reason for her act.

REPARATIONS MEET IS SET DEFINITELY FOR COMING MONDAY

Will Adjourn Later Until June Or July Is Said

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The international reparations conference recommended by the Young plan advisory committee of the bank for international settlements will definitely meet at Lausanne, Switzerland, one week from today.

It will last three or four days, and then be adjourned until June or July, when the political situation in France, Germany and the United States are at least to some extent cleared up.

This was the positive information given to International News Service today by a high authoritative source. Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy have reached an "understanding" on the course of procedure which will make the Lausanne meeting the briefest international conference in history.

This four-power "understanding" provides for extension of the moratorium on Germany's conditional reparations payments until December 31, 1931. When the conference reconvenes in the summer, international bankers are expected to announce extension of their "standstill" agreement on Germany's short-term credits to coincide with the prolonged reparations moratorium.

By December 31 of this year, authorities of the four nations involved in the "understanding" feel that the situation will have so developed to enable all countries to come to a satisfactory agreement on a long reparations moratorium, while the United States will be urged to sanction a similar lengthy postponement of war debt payments.

It was generally admitted in Whitehall that the conference assembling at Lausanne on January 25 will be little more than a smoke-screen designed to obtain at least a few months' postponement of further payments, regarded as vital in view of the existing economic situation.

MOTOR INDUSTRY IS RIDING FIRST WAVE OF SALES INCREASE

Prosperity Returns In Auto Field Sales Reports Show

DETROIT, Jan. 18.—The automotive industry of America, hard hit by the world-wide buyers' strike, today rode the first wave of returning sales. No false optimism is this, but an actual increase in car sales backed by indisputable records.

December, usually showing a big decline in sales compared with the preceding month, resulted in a sales increase in twenty-three key states last month. R. L. Polk Co., compilers of official passenger car and truck registrations throughout the United States, today stated. From its reports Polk Co. stated new passenger car sales last month would total 76,700 units compared with 75,829 in November.

Sale of 76,700 passenger cars means little to the motor world, but starting last April there had been a persistent decline in sales each month. December turned the tide. If increased values, fundamental improvements in bodies and motors and sales effort count, the industry will not allow that tide to turn again.

Five year averages show that December sales averaged 18 per cent below the preceding November. New truck sales last month were set at 12,700, a large reduction from the sales of previous years and 17.8 per cent less than November sales. But the average sales drop from November to December in the last five years has been 29 per cent.

Auto factories' payrolls are increasing. The January wages paid in motor plants at Pontiac near here today was estimated at more than $2,000,000 compared to $1,461,625 last month. The February payroll will at least approximate the January total, according to production schedules.

Out at Dearborn, the great experimental laboratories of the Ford Motor Company have been mysteriously busy for three months. Henry Ford in his forthcoming new model is expected to result in armed Soviet resistance, the spokesman declared. He expressed the belief the Pihnsien expedition was the forerunner of a drive against Harbin, center of the Soviet sphere of influence in Manchuria.

The expedition now being carried on against Pihnsien, Manchuria, by a Chinese "puppet" army backed by the Japanese, is bound to result in armed Soviet resistance, the spokesman declared. He expressed the belief the Pihnsien expedition was the forerunner of a drive against Harbin, center of the Soviet sphere of influence in Manchuria.

TOKYO, Jan. 18.—Japan today officially announced she does not want a non-aggression pact with Russia.

Neither does she want any sort of military alliance, a government communique stated, similar to that existing between France and Russia.

Not deprecating the value of the Franco-Russian pact, Japan stated that European conditions were different than those of the Orient, and that such an alliance would not apply in her dealings with Russia.

The communique was issued as the government reported on dispatches from Moscow in which Soviet officials revealed they had been turned down by Japan in attempts to negotiate a non-aggression pact for protection of both countries' interests in north Manchuria.

Predictions of an open conflict in North Manchuria grew here recently, particularly as a result of serious rioting at Harbin.

BODY IDENTIFIED

BELLAIR, O., Jan. 18.—The body of a pajama-clad man which was found this morning in the Ohio River, was identified today as that of Daniel Fuller, 50, of Steubenville, who disappeared from his home Saturday night. Investigation was started to determine whether Fuller was a victim of suicide or murder.

Intermarriage To Blame For Trouble Star Claims

(Editor's Note: Lila Lee, motion picture star, a frequent visitor in Hawaii and the South Seas, has written for International News Service her explanation of the present turmoil in Honolulu. It is presented herewith.)

By LILA LEE
Copyright, 1932, by I. N. S.
HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 18.—The exotic life of love and romance runs smoothly among the beautiful Polynesians of the South Sea island of Tahiti.

There these happy carefree children of nature do not intermarry with inferior races like the Polynesians did in Honolulu, Hawaii, where terrible crimes recently have been committed as a result.

I have never seen people so happy and gay. They laugh, play, sing and dance when they are not swimming, fishing or diving for pearls.

When I first landed in the harbor of Papeete on Tahiti, I learned how the French government protected its "pearls of the Pacific" from the outside world.

Each person who visits any of the French owned society islands, of which Tahiti is one, must have a steamship ticket to some other foreign port, a doctor's certificate of good health and a character reference.

Government officials explained these three rules helped keep "bad combers," criminals and corruption out of the islands.

However, love among the natives goes on unquestioned in accordance with their own peculiar morals.

In Hawaii a lot of trouble was caused by rich women who invite advances from beach boys and half-breed natives. The women seem to go mad under the spell of the tropics.

But in Tahiti familiarity with natives is impossible because of the strict regulations and the aloofness of the male Polynesians.

After I had been there several weeks and had fallen into the care-free, lazy life of the tropics I loved to take passage on the slow moving steamer which traded among the many islands of the society group.

This steamer, which traded mostly in copra or dried coconut meat, put into the smaller islands inhabited only by native Polynesians.

These natives seem to care little about the outside world. Their only outside contacts were with this steamer and two ships which put in at Papeete.

While on one of the inter island trips, I talked to an old tribal chieftain who told me his people many, many moons ago sailed to Honolulu in their queer "outrigger" boats.

In talks I had later with sea captains, I learned these people were once expert navigators, but now it is a lost art. Many years ago, it was thought Polynesians from Tahiti sailed to Honolulu and inhabited the Hawaiian Islands.

Large native feasts are held often in Tahiti which last for several days. On these festival occasions, the women forget the inhibitions taught them by white missionaries.

After eating plentifully of raw fish, bananas and other fruits and drinking fermented coconut milk, the natives begin to sing and dance.

When the dance reached a certain point, the women take off their clothes and put on the Pareu. This dress consists of a single piece of brightly colored cotton cloth which they wrap loosely around their brown bodies.

Incited by the lovely and haunting music, the Tahitians then would total 76,700 units compared and sing and dance until they were weary.

every abandoned auto brought to the attention of his office.

The sheriff's unblemished record in this respect has been kept intact through the disclosure Monday that he had finally traced ownership of a 1928 model Cadillac sedan, found abandoned near Cedarville last October 2, and which was recently involved in a replevin suit in Common Pleas Court.

The car, the sheriff revealed, was owned originally by Dr. J. M. Dunn, Columbus physician, from whom it was stolen December 13, 1928. All efforts to locate it meeting with failure despite an intensive investigation conducted by an insurance company, the Columbus police and the United States Department of Justice, the physician long ago had been paid $3,000 insurance money and the machine was given up for lost.

Now, thanks to a personal investigation conducted by Sheriff Baughn, the sedan, although without the last four years its sales value has diminished to about $1,500, was ready to start with a Monday to the American Automobile Insurance Co., which wrote the insurance policy.

Had it not been for the fact the sheriff was misled by incorrect information supplied by the Automobile Protective and Information Bureau at Chicago, recognized as the greatest protective organization in the world, true ownership of the car might have been established last October 17, two weeks after the auto was found abandoned.

Identification of the owner was made difficult from the beginning because the license plates had been removed and the motor and serial numbers chiseled from the car.

In possession, however, of the body and job numbers to start with, the sheriff first sent cards bearing information to authorities of all nearby cities. On October 10 he wrote the nationally known protective association, Western division, National Automobile Theft Bureau, and was advised this particular Cadillac was a 1918 model and had been shipped June 19 of that year to the Cleveland Cadillac Co.

The association declared it could be of no further aid in the investigation because the Cleveland firm

WIFE-SLAYER FACES INSANITY CHARGE AS SEARCH BEARS FRUIT

Warren Cluhman Is Jailed Following His Surrender

WARREN, O., Jan. 18.—Insanity proceedings today confronted Arch F. Knisley, 42, who allegedly has confessed to Sheriff John C. Risher that he shot and killed his wife, Harriet, 40, in the lobby of the Union Savings and Trust Co., here last Wednesday.

Knisley, the subject of a four-state manhunt, since the slaying of his wife, was captured late yesterday at the home of a friend at Wheeling, W. Va., by Risher, who had been notified of his whereabouts by a mysterious telephone call earlier in the day.

The informant on the telephone stated that Knisley would give himself up if Risher would go to a Wheeling address with Knisley's brother, Jack Knisley, and R. G. Day, Warren attorney.

Although searching parties at the time were scouring the hills of West Virginia for Knisley under the direction of Fred (Doc) McCafferty, 25, a nephew of Knisley forced to accompany him on his dash for freedom, the three men immediately went to the Ohio river town.

Upon entering the dwelling, Risher said they found Knisley lying on a couch and were greeted with a cheery "hello." The hunted man agreed to accompany them back to Warren willingly, Risher said.

On the return trip, Knisley admitted the slaying, according to Risher, and said that he shot his wife following a quarrel over money. He said Mrs. Knisley left their home after their dispute and that he followed her to the bank and shot her as she entered the lobby, Risher declared.

Knisley, prominent clubman and former president of the City Lumber Co. here, was an inmate at the Massillon State Hospital during January, 1931.

He said since the slaying he had been traveling around towns in West Virginia. McCafferty gave himself up to Warren police late Saturday after he left Knisley at Follansbee, W. Va., where Knisley had spent the night of the murder.

BEAUTY MOURNS AS HUSBAND IS TAKEN

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Hazel Forbes, Polles beauty, was prostrated today while arrangements were made to take the body of her husband, Paul O. Richmond, whom she married last year after an elopement to Maryland, to Prospect, O., his home town, for burial. Richmond died yesterday at Harbor Sanitarium from double pneumonia. Since he was stricken early this month, his wife occupied a room at the sanitarium next to his to be able constantly to attend him.

FAMILIES TRAPPED BY WATER AWAITING ARRIVAL OF BOATS

Section Blanketed By Water After River Levees Break

CHARLESTON, Miss., Jan. 18.—A fleet of motorboats rushed today to Tippecanoe Basin to rescue families trapped in their homes by flood waters.

Some 2,000 inhabitants of the region were marooned and in desperate straits by the sudden convergence of two giant walls of water dashing over the delta countryside from gaps in the Tallahatchee River levee system.

The angry waters submerged the basins of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad, cutting off the principal means of communication with the outside world.

The only means of escape from the flood-ravaged Tippecanoe basin today was by boat, but there were not sufficient vessels to accommodate all the imperiled residents. An urgent appeal was sounded by the Red Cross and flood commission relief workers for more boats of all descriptions.

The motorboat fleet enroute to the basin was expected to reach the stricken territory sometime today, it was announced by the Red Cross.

Pressing all available boats in the vicinity into use, relief workers have already begun the task of evacuating residents of the basin. Hundreds of refugees were streaming into Charleston. This city itself was severed from communication with the outside world, except by telephone and telegraph.

Some 200 square miles of this rich delta region were under a blanket of water reaching a depth of twenty feet in some places. In many of the deluged towns and villages families were living atop their houses, awaiting the arrival of rescue boats.

Six major fissures in the Tallahatchee levee system belched watery avalanches while hundreds of emergency workers fought ceaselessly to stem the onrush and prevent new breaks with sandbags.

The crests of the hills were dotted with the camps of refugees who fled to the higher reaches before the fury of Mississippi's most violent inland flood.

The flood waters of the Tippecanoe basin were flowing down toward Greenwood to the south of this city, emptying into the Yazoo and Yazoo Rivers. Crews of workers labored frantically to reinforce the new government dykes in the Greenwood vicinity where all rivers were above flood levels. Two sections of Greenwood were already inundated.

ADVERTISING MAN PLUNGES TO DEATH

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Plunging fourteen stories to the sidewalk before the horrified gaze of his wife, Clarence E. Brinkerhoff, wealthy head of an advertising concern, was dead today.

Before he fell to his death Brinkerhoff clung desperately to a window ledge for a minute, screaming for help, while his frantic wife helplessly looked on from an adjacent window.

The wife and mother, Mrs. Harriet Brinkerhoff, were in the living room of the apartment when they heard the man's shouts for help. They rushed to Brinkerhoff's bedroom, but the door was locked. The wife then dashed to the bathroom window from where she witnessed the fatal plunge.

Police today held the theory that the wealthy advertising man had opened his windows and was sitting on the ledge when suddenly he lost his balance. His business affairs and his health were declared to be in good condition.

TWO RUM RUNNERS CAUGHT BY GUARD

BOSTON, Jan. 18.—Two rum runners loaded with liquor valued at $100,000 were captured today by coastguard patrol boats after a chase through the fog-shrouded waters of the harbor.

The seizure of liquor was the largest ever made in the harbor waters and climaxed a twenty-four hour vigil by the entire east Boston coastguard fleet.

INDIANS AIDED

GALLUP, N. M., Jan. 18.—Six of Uncle Sam's bombing planes, designed for death and destruction, had today brought food and hope to thousands of Navajo Indians facing starvation on the vast reservations of New Mexico and Arizona.

Beans, flour, salt pork, dried fruit and sugar were dropped in the Indian camps from the planes, which flew over the villages which have been isolated for the past month because of enormous snowdrifts.

MOTOR INDUSTRY IS RIDING FIRST WAVE OF SALES INCREASE

Prosperity Returns In Auto Field Sales Reports Show

DETROIT, Jan. 18.—The automotive industry of America, hard hit by the 'world-wide' buyers' strike, today rode the first wave of returning sales. No false optimism is this, but an actual increase in car sales backed by indisputable records.

December, usually showing a big decline in sales compared with the preceding month, resulted in a sales increase in twenty-three key states last month. R. L. Polk Co., compilers of official passenger car and truck registrations throughout the United States, today stated. From its reports Polk Co. stated new passenger car sales last month would total 76,700 units compared with 75,829 in November.

Sale of 76,700 passenger cars means little to the motor world, but starting last April there had been a persistent decline in sales each month. December turned the tide. It increased values fundamental improvements in bodies and motors and sales effort count, the industry will not allow that tide to turn again.

Five year averages show that December sales averaged 18 per cent below the preceding November.

New truck sales last month were set at 12,700, a large reduction from the sales of previous years and 17.5 per cent less than November sales. But the average sales drop from November to December in the last five years has been 29 per cent.

Auto factories' payrolls are increasing. The January wages paid in motor plants at Pontiac near here today was estimated at more than $2,000,000 compared to $1,461,625 last month. The February payroll will at least approximate the January total, according to production schedules.

Out at Dearborn, the great experimental laboratories of the Ford Motor Company have been mysteriously busy for three months. Henry Ford in his forthcoming new model is expected to offer purchasers choice of an eight or four cylinder car.

All these things have meant huge expenditures, but the builders have thrown great sums to the steel, textile, and allied industries as well as to labor.

Auto leaders believe their business will directly or indirectly help many other American industries.

FINAL CHAPTER WRITTEN IN CAR CASE AFTER WEEKS OF SEARCH

The Royal Northwest Mounted Police, who always get their man, have something of a counterpart in Sheriff John Baughn who, since he took office more than a year ago, has the unique record of having returned to the owners every abandoned auto brought to the attention of his office.

The sheriff's unblemished record in this respect has been kept intact through the disclosure Monday that he had finally traced ownership of a 1925 model Cadillac sedan, found abandoned near Cedarville last October 2, and which was recently involved in a replevin suit in Common Pleas Court.

The car, the sheriff revealed, was owned originally by Dr. J. M. Dunn, Columbus physician, from whom it was stolen December 13, 1928. All efforts to locate it until now, thanks to a personal investigation conducted by Sheriff Baughn, the sedan, although without in the last four years its sales value has diminished to about $1,500, was turned over a week ago Monday to the American Automobile Insurance Co., which wrote the insurance policy.

Had it not been for the fact the sheriff was misled by incorrect information supplied by the Automobile Protective and Information Bureau at Chicago, recognized as the greatest protective organization in the world, true ownership of the car might have been established last October 17, two weeks before the auto was found abandoned.

Identification of the owner was made difficult from the beginning because the license plates had been removed and the motor and serial numbers chiseled from the car.

In possession, however, of the body and job numbers to start with, the sheriff first sent cards bearing information to authorities of all nearby cities. On October 10 he wrote the nationally known protective association, Western Theft Bureau, and was advised this particular Cadillac was a 1918 model and had been shipped June 19 of that year to the Cleveland Cadillac Co.

The association declared it could be of no further aid in the investigation because the Cleveland firm had not announced his candidacy for the United States senate until probably the deadline for filing, he announced here today.

"The moment a man is an announced candidate he should answer the call of political meetings and engagements throughout the state," Bettman said. "The pressure of my work as attorney general is so great that I shall not jump into the political arena until I have to."

WARREN CLUBMAN IS JAILED FOLLOWING HIS SURRENDER

WARREN, O., Jan. 18.—Insanity proceedings today confronted Arch F. Knisley, 42, who allegedly has confessed to Sheriff John C. Risher that he shot and killed his wife, Harriet, 40, in the lobby of the Union Savings and Trust Co., here last Wednesday.

Knisley, the subject of a four-state manhunt, since the slaying of his wife, was captured late yesterday at the home of a friend at Wheeling, W. Va., by Risher, who had been notified of his whereabouts by a mysterious telephone call earlier in the day.

The information on the telephone stated that Knisley would give himself up if Risher would go to a Wheeling address with Knisley's brother, Jack Knisley, and R. G. Day, Warren attorney.

Although searching parties at the time were scouring the hills of West Virginia for Knisley under the direction of Fred (Deke) McCafferty, 26, a nephew of Knisley forced to accompany him on his dash for freedom, the three men immediately went to the Ohio river town.

Upon entering the dwelling, Risher said they found Knisley lying on a couch and were greeted with a cheerful "hello." The hunted man agreed to accompany them back to Warren willingly, Risher said.

On the return trip, Knisley admitted the slaying, according to Risher, and said that he shot his wife following a quarrel over money. He said Mrs. Knisley left their home after their dispute and that he followed her to the bank and shot her as she entered the lobby, Risher declared.

Knisley, prominent clubman and former president of the City Lumber Co. here, was an inmate at the Massillon State Hospital during January, 1931.

He said since the slaying he had been traveling around towns in West Virginia. McCafferty gave himself up to Warren police late Saturday after he left Knisley at Follansbee, W. Va., where Knisley had spent the night of the murder.

BEATTMAN TO DELAY ENTERING RACE

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 18.—"Due to the pressure of business," Attorney General Gilbert Beattman will not announce his candidacy for the United States senate until probably the deadline for filing, he announced here today.

FAMILIES TRAPPED BY WATER AWAITING ARRIVAL OF BOATS

Section Blanketed By Water After River Levees Break

CHARLESTON, Miss., Jan. 18.—A fleet of motorboats rushed today to Tippecanoe Basin to rescue families trapped in their homes by flood waters.

Some 2,000 inhabitants of the region were marooned and in desperate straits by the sudden convergence of two giant walls of water dashing over the delta countryside from gaps in the Tallahatchee River levee system.

The angry waters submerged the rails of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad, cutting off the principal means of communication with the outside world.

The only means of escape from the flood-ravaged Tippecanoe basin today was by boat, but there were not sufficient vessels to accommodate all the imperiled residents. An urgent appeal was sounded by the Red Cross and flood commission relief workers for more boats of all descriptions.

The motorboat fleet enroute to the basin was expected to reach the stricken territory sometime today, it was announced by the Red Cross.

Pressing all available boats in the vicinity into use, relief workers have already begun the task of evacuating residents of the basin. Hundreds of refugees were streaming into Charleston, this city itself was severed from communication with the outside world, except by telephone and telegraph.

Some 200 square miles of this rich delta region was under a blanket of water reaching a depth of twenty feet in some places. In many of the deluged towns and villages families were living atop their houses, awaiting the arrival of rescue boats.

Six major fissures in the Tallahatchee levee system belched watery avalanches while hundreds of emergency workers fought ceaselessly to stem the onrush and prevent new breaks with sandbags.

The crests of the hills were dotted with the camps of refugees who fled to the higher reaches before the fury of Mississippi's most violent inland flood.

The flood waters of the Tippecanoe basin were flowing down toward Greenwood to the south of this city, emptying into the Yazoo and Mississippi Rivers. Crews of workers labored frantically to reinforce the new government dikes in the Greenwood vicinity, where all rivers were above flood levels. Two sections of Greenwood were already inundated.

ADVERTISING MAN PLUNGES TO DEATH

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Plunging fourteen stories to the sidewalk before the horrified gaze of his wife, Clarence E. Brinckerhoff, wealthy head of an advertising concern, was dead today.

Before he fell to his death Brinckerhoff clung desperately to a window ledge for a minute, screaming for help, while his frantic wife helplessly looked on from an adjacent window.

The wife and mother, Mrs. Harriet Brinckerhoff, were in the living room of the apartment when they heard the man's shouts for help. They rushed to Brinckerhoff's bedroom, but the door was locked. The wife then dashed to the bathroom window from where she witnessed the fatal plunge.

Police today held the theory that the wealthy advertising man had opened his windows and was sitting on the ledge when suddenly he lost his balance. His business affairs and his health were declared to be in good condition.

TWO RUM RUNNERS CAUGHT BY GUARD

BOSTON, Jan. 18.—Two rum runners loaded with liquor valued at $100,000 were captured today by coastguard patrol boats after a chase through the fog-shrouded waters of the harbor.

The seizure of liquor was the largest ever made in the harbor waters and climaxed a twenty-four hour vigil by the entire east Boston coastguard fleet.

INDIANS AIDED

GALLUP, N. M., Jan. 18.—Six of Uncle Sam's bombing planes, designed for death and destruction, had today brought food and hope to thousands of Navajo Indians facing starvation on the vast reservations of New Mexico and Arizona.

Beans, flour, salt pork, dried fruit and sugar were dropped into the Indian camps from the planes, which flew over the villages which have been isolated for the past month because of enormous snowdrifts.

FINAL CHAPTER IN CAR CASE WRITTEN AFTER LONG SEARCH

had doubtless destroyed its records of that date.

Still unsatisfied that his search for the owner would be futile, the sheriff then wrote the Ohio Bureau of Motor Vehicles with regard to the serial numbers, only to learn the bureau kept no records of serial numbers or makes of autos on file, and the bureau was therefore not in a position to say to whom the license tags for the Cadillac had been issued.

Once more the investigation appeared at a standstill, but Sheriff Baughn continued his search. Through the good offices of a friend, Paul Rockenbach, Columbus representative of insurance companies, he obtained the services of William L. McBride, New York City, an expert on secret numbers of Cadillacs.

The expert, at the sheriff's direction, tore down the auto and found the secret numbers. Through these numbers the sheriff learned the motor number from the Cadillac factory. The rest was simple. The sheriff's task was then made easy.

He learned the car was a 1928 instead of a 1918 model and that it had been shipped July 18, 1928 to the Towel Cadillac Co., Columbus, which had sold the machine to Dr. Dunn, Columbus.

Meantime, a dispute had arisen over possession of the auto. Claiming he was entitled to have the car, on the ground he found it near his home and the rightful owner could not be traced, Harry Hamman, near Cedarville, brought suit to replevin the machine.

Because he desired a test decision of the case in the courts, the sheriff kept the result of his successful quest for the owner a secret, pending a court ruling.

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy's decision, sustaining a demurrer to the petition and holding that no private individual is entitled to possess an auto from which marks of identification have been removed, was handed down January 11.

On the same afternoon Sheriff Baughn turned the car over to Otis Skinner, claims department manager at the Columbus branch office of the American Automobile Insurance Co., who had given the sheriff permission to keep the auto until the test case was decided.

Thus the final chapter in the case was written and the sheriff now has the distinction of having identified the lawful owners of forty-seven abandoned autos in 1931 and nine so far in 1932.

As a reward for his persistence in the investigation, Sheriff Baughn has a letter of acknowledgment received January 13 from Mr. Skinner, of the insurance firm's Columbus branch. The letter read:

"I wish to take this opportunity to thank you and your department for the valuable services rendered to me and my company in connection with the discovery of Dr. J. M. Dunn's Cadillac. This car was stolen December 13, 1928 and we put forth every effort to locate it.

The U. S. department of justice and our Columbus Police department devoted considerable time to the case and we had about given it up as lost when you notified us of the recovery. We thoroughly appreciate the difficulty you had in locating the owners of this car due to the fact that the motor and serial numbers have been destroyed by the thieves."

SPRING VALLEY MAN SEVERELY INJURED BY AUTO SATURDAY

Struck by an automobile driven by William Hath, Columbus, after he was reported to have stepped in the path of the car in the business section of Spring Valley Saturday night, James Smith, 70, Spring Valley, sustained serious injuries and is confined in McClellan Hospital here.

Brought to the Xenia hospital in an ambulance after receiving first aid treatment at the office of Dr. William Hartinger, Smith was discovered to have received a light fracture of the skull above the eyes, fractures of the right thigh and both legs, just above the ankles and a skull in the head.

After reaching the hospital, he became unconscious, but Sunday morning he regained consciousness and his condition was reported as satisfactory.

According to William Copey, village marshal, Smith was walking across the street a short distance from the regular crossing place for pedestrians, and stepped in front of the auto. The driver was exonerated of responsibility.

A NEW DRESS-AND NOT BLACK

That's What "Grandma" Davis Wants As She Contemplates 101 Years Of Life

MRS. SARAH DAVIS

MATERIAL for a new dress—something bright because "she's tired of black," is what "Grandma" Davis of Lake St. wants.

After one hundred and one years of living the eternal feminine urge still burns brightly in the heart of this woman, who was born Sarah Frances Fottrell in Cincinnati January 18, 1831. Monday was her birthday.

The one hundred and first birthday of Mrs. Davis found her in much the same health as a year ago, when many flocked to her little home to congratulate her on attaining a century of life.

One more year of living has not dimmed the brightness of her eyes nor affected her hearing, nor has it dulled the wit of her tongue by which she expresses her opinions of things modern.

The radio of 1932 offers "too much screechy music" to interest this woman who was born before the days of the telegraph and telephone. The airplane holds no allure for her.

"Work. Work hard, early late, indoors and out. Love your religion, your home, your family and your neighbor. Take an interest in life and keep abreast with the times."

That's the creed from which Mrs. Davis has woven the pattern of her life. That's about all the rule she has used to carry her past a century of life.

And, at 101, she is interested in a new dress. Something bright because she's tired of black.

"And I could make it myself, too, if I could see well enough," she adds.

THIRD CANDIDATE ENTERS LISTS FOR SEAT IN CONGRESS

The field of candidates seeking the Republican nomination at the May 10 primary to succeed Charles Brand, Urbana, as congressman from the Seventh Ohio District, has been increased to three with formal announcement Saturday of the candidacy of Ray Hennessey, 43, Bellefontaine advertising firm owner.

Hennessey's entry into the race assures a three-cornered fight for the nomination. Attorney L. T. Marshall, Xenia, former state senator, and Edward E. Greiner, Springfield banker and manufacturer, have already launched active campaigns.

Born in Logan County, Mr. Hennessey has never before sought public office, and he expects to campaign on a platform in which he favors lower tariff, higher taxes on incomes of $10,000 a year and more, and resubmission to the states of the prohibition question, thus injecting the wet and dry issue into the congressional campaign.

For the last fifteen years Mr. Hennessey has conducted successful advertising business under the firm name of H. and B. advertising Co. Seven years before going into business for himself, he was employed by the old Index-Republican Co., publishers at that time of a Republican newspaper at Bellefontaine under Walter and Lee J. Roebuck. The Bellefontaine candidate has a wide acquaintance.

NOONDAY MEETINGS CLOSE ON SATURDAY

One of the most helpful talks of the series was given at the noonday meeting of the Bijou Theater Saturday when the Rev. E. A. Rager, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, spoke on "Is the Revival Over in Xenia?"

He said in part: "I do not believe that the revival is over in Xenia. We have just begun good works in Xenia for God's kingdom. Jesus said, 'If I abide in you and you abide in me.' Not only is He to abide in us but we are to abide in Him. Abide does not mean to just come to church on Sunday but it means just what it says—to abide—to stay by all the time."

"If we want the revival to continue in Xenia we must be willing to put prayer meeting and church ahead of pleasure," the Rev. Mr. Rager continued. "We must love one another even as He has loved us. Let us allow Christ to have first place in our lives and the revival will continue in Xenia."

The noonday meetings were held daily for two weeks under the auspices of the Laymen's Evangelistic Association.

her, although she has tried almost every other mode of travel. The young people "are not raised right"—"the Indians more more clothes than some of them." Some of the bankers, she thinks, are "in cahoots" with the bank bandits.

After one hundred and one years of living Mrs. Davis still very much alive to the times and not afraid to have her own opinions. Still, she would like to get downtown to the stores, to find that bright material she has in mind for a new dress.

Samples brought her have not met with her approval. But then what could you expect from a man? Her son, Alvin, 72, still cares for her and another son, George, spends part of his time with his mother. From the pinnacle of her years she looks down upon five generations of her family.

"Work. Work hard, early late, indoors and out. Love your religion, your home, your family and your neighbor. Take an interest in life and keep abreast with the times."

That's the creed from which Mrs. Davis has woven the pattern of her life. That's about all the rule she has used to carry her past a century of life.

And, at 101, she is interested in a new dress. Something bright because she's tired of black.

"And I could make it myself, too, if I could see well enough," she adds.

REVIVAL SERVICES AT TRINITY CHURCH CLOSE HERE SUNDAY

Revival meetings, which have been in session at Trinity M. E. Church for two weeks closed Sunday evening with the Rev. C. A. Hutchison, Cedarville, preaching on the theme, "The Hidden Treasure." At the morning service the Rev. Mr. Hutchison preached on "The Unknown," using as his text the words from the parable of "The Ten Virgins", "Verily, I know you not." Several persons were baptized at this service and received into the church.

At the evening service the Rev. Mr. Hutchison said: "In life it is necessary to buy not just the treasure but the field. If you want to purchase love you cannot buy just love but must purchase the field in which love lies, that is, the home. If we want good men in the house we must buy the field of a proper kind of fatherhood and motherhood. Great character is found in the field of great character."

The speaker then continued: "If people don't attend prayer meeting and church and the things which develop the religious life, if they don't buy the field of religious experience they will lose out. When you are converted you buy the field in which religious experience lives. The preparation of the preacher is more difficult than the preparation of the sermon. Sometimes people feel they need a change of preachers when what they need is a change of heart. When you get a prepared message and a prepared preacher and a prepared congregation then you have a combination that cannot be beaten and the fire of God comes down. I would that we could fill our corner of Xenia full of prayer so that we might buy a field for a real church."

Those who have taken part in the revival meetings feel that they have been a success for from them has developed the organization of a young people's Prayer League, more than a score have found Christ and fifteen new members have been received into the church. It is pointed out. The Rev. E. A. Rager, pastor, wishes to thank all who have helped to make the meetings successful, especially the Gazette for its cooperation in taking the messages and reports of each meeting through the city and county.

A NEW DRESS-AND NOT BLACK

MRS. SARAH DAVIS

MATERIAL for a new dress—something bright because "she's tired of black," is what "Grandma" Davis of Lake St., wants.

After one hundred and one years of living the eternal feminine urge still burns brightly in the heart of this woman, who was born Sarah Frances Fottrell in Cincinnati January 18, 1831. Monday was her birthday.

The one hundred and first birthday of Mrs. Davis, a woman in much the same health as a year ago, when many flocked to her little home to congratulate her on attaining a century of life.

One more year of living has not dimmed the brightness of her eyes nor affected her hearing, nor has it dulled the wit of her tongue by which she expresses her opinions of things modern.

The radio of 1932 offers "too much screechy music" to interest this woman who was born before the days of the telegraph and telephone. The airplane holds no allure for her.

Because he desired a test decision of the case in the courts, the sheriff kept the result of his successful quest for the owner a secret, pending a court ruling.

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy's decision, sustaining a demurrer to the petition and holding that no private individual is entitled to possess an auto from which marks of identification have been removed, was handed down January 11.

On the same afternoon Sheriff Baughn turned the car over to Otis Skinner, claims department manager at the Columbus branch office of the American Automobile Insurance Co., who had given the sheriff permission to keep the auto until the test case was decided.

Thus the final chapter in the case was written and the sheriff now has the distinction of having identified the lawful owners of forty-seven abandoned autos in 1931 and nine so far in 1932.

As a reward for his persistence in the investigation, Sheriff Baughn has a letter of acknowledgment he received January 13 from Mr. Skinner, of the insurance firm's Columbus branch. The letter read:

"I wish to take this opportunity to thank you and your department for the valuable services rendered to me and my company in connection with the discovery of Mr. J. M. Dunn's Cadillac. This car was stolen December 13, 1928 and we put forth every effort to locate it. The U. S. department of justice and our Columbus police department devoted considerable time to the case and we had about given it up as lost when you notified us of the recovery. We thoroughly appreciate the difficulty you had in locating the owners of this car due to the fact that the motor and serial numbers have been destroyed by the thieves."

SPRING VALLEY MAN SEVERELY INJURED BY AUTO SATURDAY

Struck by an automobile driven by William Hath, Columbus, after he was reported to have stepped in the path of the car in the business section of Spring Valley Saturday night, James Smith, 70, Spring Valley, sustained serious injuries and is confined in McClellan Hospital here.

Brought to the Xenia hospital in an ambulance after receiving first aid treatment at the office of Dr. William Hartinger, Smith was discovered to have received a light fracture of the skull above the eyes, fractures of the right thigh and both legs, last above the ankles, and a wound in the head.

After reaching the hospital, he became unconscious, but Sunday morning he regained consciousness and his condition was reported as satisfactory.

According to William Copey, village marshal, Smith was walking across the street a short distance upon the regular crossing place for pedestrians, and stepped in front of the auto. The driver was exonerated of responsibility.

One of the most helpful talks of the series was given at the noonday meeting of the Bijou Theater Saturday when the Rev. E. A. Rager, pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, spoke on "Is the Revival Over in Xenia?"

STREAMS REcede AS HEAVY RAINS STOP; SUNSET IS PICTURE

Streams in Greene County, which had risen to near flood stage during the last three days, were reported to be receding slowly Monday, with the prolonged spell of rainy weather apparently at an end.

After three days of almost continuous rain, gloom and overcast skies, Xenians were afforded a glimpse of a most picturesque sunset early Sunday evening. A strong wind brushed the clouds away, revealing a clear blue sky and the sun set in a colorful blaze.

Rainfall during the last three days totaled 2.36 inches, bringing the total precipitation so far in January to 4.29 inches. Weatherman Ernest L. Harner reported. The rain was measured at 1.16 inches on Friday, with .06 of an inch on Saturday and 1.14 inches for the twenty-four hour period ending at 6 p. m. Sunday.

Temperatures remained almost unchanged during the rainy period, the maximum being 57 degrees and the minimum 37 degrees over Saturday night and Sunday.

LIGHT COMES FROM COUNTY COMMITTEE FAITH SAYS PASTOR WILL SOON ENDORSE CLINTON COUNTIAN

"Light for dark days comes from faith in God and good works, joys in God and corrected desires, commitment to God and directions for our pathway, and repose in God and confidence in his providence," said the Rev. W. H. Tilford in a special sermon on "Light for Dark Days" or "The Secret of Tranquility" at services at the Presbyterian Church Sunday morning.

"No happier individual lives than the one who so arranges his life that he is going about doing good," said the Rev. Mr. Tilford. He also said: "Desires can be changed and when they are corrected and we desire eternal things rather than temporal things, we shall be satisfied and God will bring to pass the desires of our hearts for our will is entered in His will and we have perfect harmony." The great restlessness and discontent of life would be gone and tranquility would come if people today would submit in a great commitment to God and claim his promise that "He shall bring it to pass" . . . Repose and have patience in God."

REV. STEWART ENDS SERVICES IN XENIA

Special Meetings at the First Baptist Church under the leadership of Evangelist Ralph E. Stewart, Atlanta, Ga., closed Sunday morning with services in the auditorium of the First U. P. Church. The evangelist spoke on "Christ Crowded Out" and Mrs. W. E. Hull, retiring director of the choir of the First M. E. Church, sang a solo, "What Will You Do With Jesus?"

In the morning at the First Baptist Church the Rev. Mr. Stewart spoke on "The Gospel A-B-C's" which are "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God," "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" and "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Nine persons were baptized by the Rev. J. R. Lunsford preceding the morning service and several more are to be baptized Sunday morning. According to the Rev. Mr. Lunsford the two weeks' series of meetings were successful.

Candidacy of N. Floyd Templin, Clarksville, O., business man for the Republican nomination for state senator from the Fifth-Sixth Senatorial District, composed of Greene, Clinton, Highland, Ross and Fayette Counties, is expected to receive the endorsement soon of the Greene County Republican executive and central committees.

Mr. Templin is serving his second term as representative from Clinton County in the state legislature, and he is expected to have no opposition for the Republican nomination.

The resolution read, in part: "Whereas, it has been the well established rule of the Republican party in the 5th-6th Senatorial District to rotate by counties the Republican nomination for state senator, we, the members of the Republican Central Committee of Clinton County, recommend a continuance of this rule." All committee members, with one exception, signed the endorsement.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

It is good that thou shouldst take hold of this; yea, also from this withdraw not thine hand: for he that feareth God shall come forth of them all.—Ecclesiastes, vii, 18.

PARADISE OF PACIFIC

An evil spirit has invaded the Paradise of the Pacific. Ugly stories are coming out of Honolulu of attacks on women by bands of "breeds." The capital and chief city of Hawaii seems to be the victim of a crime wave differing only in extent from those which frequently sweep over cities in this country. This is something new on Oahu; and in attempting to fix responsibility for it, we should be careful not to jump to hasty conclusions.

The native Hawaiians may be left out of the picture entirely. They are not charged with the offenses that have led Honolulu to the brink of a race war. The Kanakas are a gentle and lovable people, whose own native enemy is the amiable tropical weakness of indolence. Capt. Cook found them sitting about their poi pots, strung with leis, singing to the surf that pounded on their inimitable beaches; a happy, contented people, whom Nature had planted upon one of the most beautiful spots in the world. Then came the whalers and traders and missionaries, with gin and syphilis and mother-hubbards. There were 200,000 Hawaiians in 1778. There were only 20,000 in 1929. A few more generations and the race is likely to have passed into history.

The white man also brought the intensive cultivation of sugar cane, a crop that requires sustained labor at certain stages in its development. The Kanakas could not provide this requisite. They were too few, to begin with, and they were constitutionally indisposed to this kind of work. Consequently the planters imported large numbers of Chinese, Japanese and Koreans from Asia, and of Portuguese and Porto Ricans from Europe and the West Indies. Since Hawaii was annexed to the United States there has been a large influx of Filipinos. At the present time the population of the Territory of Hawaii is about 358,000. The chief elements in it are 137,000 Japanese, 63,000 Filipinos, 25,000 Chinese, 30,000 Portuguese, 38,000 Caucasians (other than Portuguese, Spanish and Porto Ricans), 20,000 Hawaiians, 17,000 Caucasian-Hawaiians, and 11,000 Asiatic-Hawaiians. The intermarriage of these races during the past two generations has produced a mixture that would be hard to match in any other part of the world. The fruit of miscegenation has not in every instance been good.

Yet on the whole, surprisingly little crime has marred Honolulu in the past. The present outbreak is attributed by some observers to lax enforcement of law. Whatever administrative or legislative changes are necessary to clean up Hawaii and keep it safe for its own residents and for the thousands of visitors from this country who delight to spend their winters there, should be made. The responsibility to do this rests upon this country. Victims of civilization, the Hawaiians can no longer be held accountable for what transpires in a country that has been taken from them by force of numbers.

Well anyway, Japan learned about making scraps of paper of treaties by reading European literature.

U. S. Called Partner Of Nippon

By KATSUJI DEBUCHI
Japanese Ambassador to United States

The United States and Japan are partners and not rivals in the trade of the Pacific.

Economically Japan's relations with America have been growing closer year by year. Each must be one of the best customers of the other.

Perhaps it is superfluous to say that the international amity which we have at heart must be based upon a spiritual as well as an economic foundation. The great temple of peace rests upon cultural understanding as much as upon economic co-operation. Economic relations are, as a rule, governed by the law of supply and demand. In normal times they advance with the advance of living conditions.

In the other hand, cultural relations, which belong in the sphere of spirit, can be promoted only by unceasing efforts and vigilant toil. It cannot be denied that cultural interests are more enduring than economic interests as the basis of international harmony.

It is in this sense that we must endeavor to create mutual interest in arts and literature among the various peoples. I am happy to observe that the relationship between America and Japan has been for more than seventy-five years one of peace and friendliness.

Our cultural relations are even more intimate. At the very beginning ning of the era of Meiji, Japan followed the example of the United States in her system of public education. We invited many American educators and scientists to our shores to assist us. We sent large numbers of students to American schools and universities to seek knowledge. We were also fortunate in having the assistance of many of your able missionaries whose work meant so much to us, not only in the sphere of the church, but also in the field of education.

At the same time American lovers of fine arts, of whom Fenollosa and Bigelow were the most distinguished, studied and recognized our paintings and other arts and interpreted them to the western world. They did something even more valuable in that they explained to the Japanese themselves the high qualities of their own art and thus made Japanese artists and connoisseurs realize the mission they were qualified to perform in the realm of aesthetics.

All this shows what a great debt we owe to the United States. In this connection it may not be presumptuous to say that America has also profited by the new cultural outlook which she has gained through intercourse with Japan. The pictures presented here are not large in number but they have been well chosen under the direction of the department of education of Japan. They are the work of renowned contemporary Japanese artists.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK. — A young lady who keeps thoroughly abreast of the newest wrinkles in Manhattan customs, invited all her guests into her boudoir the other evening for a whiff of the place. The air was heavy with a fragrance which had a more delicate bouquet than any incense ever burned. The room was gently touched with a sweetness not of this earth.

The guests knitted brows and searched for the source of the aroma. They gave up.

"How on earth do you manage it?" she was asked.

"You'd never guess. I simply stuff a little bath salts into my radiator valves!"

HOP, SKIP AND JUMP

The newest profession is that of informer on jewel smuggling. Isolated individuals in the past have sought the 25 per cent reward paid for information leading to arrest of guilty parties, but now I hear there are at least a score who haunt the ocean liners seeking evidence, much to the joy of the government and the jewelers here.

The French Ubangi native chieftain and his three wives recently admitted to the country, after some hemming and hawing around Ellis Island, judges feminine beauty by the diameter of lower lips—which are stretched from childhood to startling dimensions, sometimes forming a ten-inch platter. The custom was adopted, I am told, 300 years ago by the Ubangias, because their women were so beautiful neighboring tribes sought to steal them, and it was thought the disfigurement would discourage attempts. Now lip-enlarging is considered necessary to loveliness.

Knowledge that the port authority is going to fit a cafeteria into observations percolates atop the George Washington span detracts, for no good reason, from the wallop the bridge used to give me, seen against a winter dusk horizon.

Tin Pan alley births far fewer of the gilded plutocrats known a few years back. Time was when a hit song topped a million copies sold, and easily. "Good Night Sweetheart," unquestionably the most successful composition of the past few years, recently made the 100,000 grade. Radio is blamed for the slacker sales. But it's all very confusing, since songs plugged over the air usually pick up in sales thereafter.

THE SASSIETY NOTE
The very uppest of the Park avenue set can't go to bed nights now until they've had their onion sandwich and glass of ale.

WHAT FEW NEW YORKERS (OR TOURISTS) KNOW
That blues shouters are so much the rage in Paris that obscure little bars out in the provinces now employ East Indians and Moroccan natives who do not know what it's all about but look the part to entertain guests.

That Park avenue gourmets now send housemen to Bleeker street and the lower East Side to buy yellow Barbary figs, pomegranates, mangoes, little gourd-shaped "zucchini" and red fava beans.

There are approximately 1,925 species of lizards which inhabit all parts of the world except the cold temperate and frigid zones.

CHICAGO WELL EQUIPPED TO HANDLE CONVENTIONS OF BOTH MAJOR PARTIES

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON. —Chicago, after all, logically is the best place in the United States for national conventions.

Even New York is no better equipped to take care of the crowds and no other city is nearly so well equipped. On an average, it is the most convenient point in the country for all the delegates to get to. And it is representative of more kinds of Americanism than any population center elsewhere in the land.

Emissaries from the lakeside metropolises at the Republican and Democratic national committees' respective meetings in Washington frankly were eager for the Jeffersonian gathering starting June 27 than for the G. O. P. event scheduled to begin June 14.

It is true, they admitted, that the G. O. P. performance undoubtedly will be a stem-winder, should a really resolute fight develop to prevent President Hoover's re-nomination, but this they did not regard as likely enough to merit serious consideration. On the opposite hand, the Democrats are relied on to furnish at least a four or five-day spectacular performance.

Hence the willingness of Chicago business men to put up $200,000 to clinch the Democratic blow-out, in comparison with the $150,000 which sufficed to secure the Republicans—though the latter were considerably mortified when they learned

Live Your Own Life? Just Try It! When One You Love Is in Danger

By MARSHALL MASLIN
You thought you could Live Your Own Life, did you?

But you failed, didn't you? Millions of people on this earth have had that ambition—and all the best of them failed.

Just as you did. If you are selfish, if you are hard, if you are callous, you CAN live your own life—but it isn't much of a life that you live. It's a tight and barricaded life that's hardly worth bothering about at all.

And if you are not selfish and callous and you try to live your own life, then the best part of you defeats your ambition.

That's true. You might as well make up your mind to it—that you CAN'T live your own life!

Why not? Well, you have no exclusive life of your own to live. The better your life is, and the happier, the less of it is yours. Every day you give part of it away and soon it is so closely interwoven with the lives of others—who love you, whom you love—that you cannot act independently.

You give part of your life to some purpose, to some cause, to some ideal, to some human being who is close to you and deeply entangled in your ways and your emotions. And after that has happened you can't do as you please without hurting someone else, without hurting your own given-away self.

It happens so slowly that sometimes you don't know about it. You have given the best part of yourself away, but you will strut and boast that you are free to LIVE YOUR OWN LIFE.

And then something happens. One you love is struck down, sickness, suffers and may die.

You haunt a hospital. You hang around helplessly. You cannot laugh, you cannot eat, you cannot work. You are stricken, too. You want to help and your own helplessness makes you sick at heart.

You have given the best part of you to that beloved one who lies there suffering and you would not have it back. You are chained and the chains that bind you so close are sacred.

And you THOUGHT you were always going to Live Your Own Life?

Fortunate Fools that we are—we never, never can!

Still, there is something in psychology.

The choice of Chicago was a jab at the governor, and was so intended. Despite denials, everyone at familiar with politics knows it.

The existence has been disclosed of a Democratic element which is hostile to him—and sufficiently powerful to have drawn first blood. It is a revelation which cannot weigh with Democrats who, though not unfriendly to the New Yorker, yet care more for party victory than for his particular personality, and who realize that party victory is jeopardized by a candidate against whom, within his own ranks, there is too much opposition.

The governor's initial defeat perhaps will prove not to have amounted to much, but it certainly has not helped him.

Budgets For The Entire Family By MRS. MARY MORTON

In estimating your food budget when you have no previous records to go on, suppose you allow $6 cents a person a day. If you have five in the family, that makes $30 a day for food or $75 for a 30-day month. Add 50 cents a day for each guest. If you are a good buyer and manager you can undoubtedly keep the actual expenses sufficiently below your estimate to give you a margin for some hospitality.

It's better to allow a definite sum in the budget for hospitality, although the ideal hospitality, of course, offers the unexpected visitor or "just what the family has." In this case there will be less left over for the next day. Hence more supplies must be purchased.

In making your menus so that you can keep inside your budget, possibly you can use lower-priced foods in each group. Or you can buy in larger quantities and get reductions, or take advantage of sales.

Discourage waste of food on the plate and food whims. Get in the habit of scrutinizing labels on cans and cartons and know just what weight or measure of each article you are getting for a given amount and how far it will go. Compare prices in different stores for the same goods.

And whatever steps toward economy you take, in other respects, be sure to keep good balance among the various groups of foods, for this is health insurance, say dietitians.

What Constitutes Diet?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

During the second and especially the third year, the child's diet should increase in variety. Through the third year the plan should be to aim towards a three-meal schedule in the fourth year.

During the second year the child should get at least one and one-half pints of milk a day. Cereals (oatmeal, cornmeal, farina, cream of wheat), vegetables (spinach, carrots, peas, beans, lima beans, tomatoes, cabbage and potatoes), eggs (soft boiled, the whole egg after fifteen months, the yolk before, once a day), meats (scraped very fine, boiled, broiled or roasted), fruits (orange juice and stewed fruits), and desserts in the form of simple custards and puddings, are all allowable during the second year.

Healthy children should weigh about 35 pounds at three years. They need about 40 calories a pound a day. At least a tenth of these should be in protein form.

Milk is the staple of the three-year-old's diet. It contains plenty of calcium which is needed for the growing bones. It also contains vitamins A, B and D, as well as energy in easily available form.

From a pint to a quart a day is the proper allowance. It is not necessary that all this be given to the child to be drunk straight. Some of the cream should be used on the cereal. Some in a soup, some as a dessert, some as bread and milk, some as custard, or junket.

Starting with breakfast, a well cooked cereal is a regular item. During the second year the cereal should be strained, but this is not essential in the third year. Cream may be used but not sugar. Sugar dulls the appetite for other and more valuable foods. The longer a knowledge of the taste of sugar is kept from a child the better. Says Dr. Rose: "Spinach is one of the popular vegetables in the nursery, but it would never be if a lollipop came first."

The teeth should be developed by using a dry, hard bread.

Fruits and vegetables, especially green vegetables, are to be added generously. If the digestion cannot stand the fibers of fruits, the juice alone may be given. But most children can take baked apple or banana or pear when the cooking has softened them.

Eggs, and especially the yolk, with its high iron and mineral and vitamin content.

A day's schedule is as follows: Breakfast: Apple sauce, cereal with cream, cup milk, slice of hard bread.

Mid-morning: A teaspoon of cod liver oil in a tablespoon or orange juice.

Dinner: Soft egg, mashed potato, green vegetable, such as spinach or peas, a cup of milk, buttered hard bread, and dessert (custard or bread pudding).

Mid-afternoon: Cup milk and slice of bread and butter.

Supper: Milk toast and prune whip.

Editor's Note: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Girl Wants To "Date"

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

No matter how carefully a girl makes her choice of a husband, she is sure some time in her marital life to feel sure she couldn't have made a worse choice.

This feeling will be quite irrespective of how much she loves her man. The thought may be a transient one, but it's certain to come, for human nature is what it is, and no two people can live together for years and years and always be in accord.

If, however, the girl has had some experience with men, has "gone around a bit" before she marries, she is less apt to be dissatisfied with her choice—or at least, to feel that she might have done better. She can't plead inexperience for marrying the man she did, anyhow.

UNDECIDED B: I think it would be wise to confide your feeling to your boy friend and ask him whether he would be willing for you to accept dates with other boys, especially as you are together so little.

The majority of persons have occasional feelings of uncertainty concerning the one they are planning to marry. They wonder whether their choice is wise, whether love is blinding them to faults, and they are assailed with misgivings. That is natural.

You are sure you love this boy, you are congenial and never quarrel, you say. Well, then, you can be reasonably sure that you will be happy together. I don't imagine the difference in your social status would matter, if it is not a very great difference.

Why not try going out with others for the few months intervening before your graduation, promising that you will let your engagement be announced then if you are of the same mind as now?

G. A. C.: I wish you could go away from home for a time and have a good time without any responsibility. G. A. C. and then see how you feel about marrying this man. It seems to me that you are merely tired of so much work and responsibility and so think you would like to marry—just because any kind of a change would look good to you. Could you get away, say, for the spring vacation, when the others could keep house?

I think, too, that you should wait to marry, if possible, until your sister has finished high school. You are plenty young enough to do that. Could she finish if you marry before her graduation? Seems to me, too, from your letter, that this man wants a housekeeper more than anything else. You can't blame him for that, but it seems like a dreamy prospect for a young girl to marry a man who wants her more for her accomplishments of cooking and cleaning than because he loves her and wants her companionship. Some day you may regret not waiting for some one your own age who will love you dearly and will want you whether you can cook or not.

I have no doubt that you could make the little girl love you. It may be that you can find your best happiness by marrying this man who you say is well able to take care of you; but I want you to think about the things I have said before you make up your mind.

BROWN EYES: Wait until your twenty-first birthday, and then you can marry, whether your father objects or not. No, your father couldn't put you in a reform school at your age, and just for having a boy friend.

B. B.: No harm in asking the boy friend to write. Sorry if I have not answered your other letter. There are so many I have to answer first those I consider most urgent.

YVONNE: No, girls don't have to kiss fellows after they don't want to—or at any other time or place.

Exercises Simple But Effective

By GLADYS GLAD

The stretching exercises about which I told you in yesterday's article are probably the simplest exercises ever devised. In fact, they're so simple that I'm afraid you'll be inclined to seriously doubt their effectiveness, and will disregard them. Which is just what I'm hoping you won't do.

In the first exercise, stand with feet together, head held as far back as possible. Tense your arm muscles. Raise your arms at the sides at shoulder level. Imagine articles just beyond reach of your fingertips, and try to reach them. Relax, dropping your arms. Then take a deep breath, hold it, and exhale it slowly.

In the second exercise, stand with your body entirely relaxed. Raise your right foot as high as possible, bending your knee and tensing the muscles of your left leg. Then straighten your right leg, describing a wide circle as you bring it to the floor. Relax and repeat with your left leg.

In the third exercise, you should lie on your back on a bed. Tense the right shoulder, lift it from the bed, and move it toward the head of the bed. Inhale while doing this, and hold the position while you exhale. Then repeat with the left shoulder tensed.

In the fourth exercise, continue to lie on your back on a bed, arms at your sides. Draw a deep breath slowly, and exhale. Then raise your arms to a perpendicular position, and imagine objects just beyond your reach. Arm muscles tensed, stretch your fingers and try to reach the imaginary articles. Hold the position for a moment. Then relax, and drop your arms slowly to first position.

In the fifth exercise, you stand erect again, with your arms folded above your head, right hand gripping left elbow, and muscles of the shoulder tensed. Breathe deeply, and slowly sway your trunk to the right, stretching your body. Hold the position for a moment. Then exhale slowly as you return gradually to an upright position. Repeat the exercise, swaying to the left side.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES
Shampoo
Thelma: The castor oil shampoo is excellent for promoting the growth of thin, dry, falling hair. It is described, along with the dandruff treatment, in my Beauty Culture booklet.

Colors
Tinita: I think that you will find shades of tan, brown, blue, gray, dark green, dark red and black most becoming to you.

Egg Pack
Marge: You may use the egg mask twice a week but I would not advise its use more often than that on a skin like yours.

Editor's Note: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and ten cents in coin for each, to cover cost of printing and handling. For her article on "Care of the Hands and Nails" and "Care of the Feet and Legs," two cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope are required. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

It is good that thou shouldst take hold of this; yea, also from this withdraw not thine hand: for he that feareth God shall come forth of them all.—Ecclesiastes, vii, 18.

PARADISE OF PACIFIC

An evil spirit has invaded the Paradise of the Pacific. Ugly stories are coming out of Honolulu of attacks on women by bands of "breds." The capital and chief city of Hawaii seems to be the victim of a crime wave differing only in extent from those which frequently sweep over cities in this country. This is something new on Oahu; and in attempting to fix responsibility for it, we should be careful not to jump to hasty conclusions.

The native Hawaiians may be left out of the picture entirely. They are not charged with the offenses that have led Honolulu to the brink of a race war. The Kanakas are a gentle and lovable people, whose own worst native enemy is the amiable tropical weakness of indolence. Capt. Cook found them sitting about their poi pots, strung with leis, singing to the surf that pounded on their inhospitable beaches; a happy, contented people, whom Nature had planted upon one of the most beautiful spots in the world. Then came the whalers and traders and missionaries, with gin and syphilis and mother-hubbards. There were 200,000 Hawaiians in 1778. There were only 20,000 in 1929. A few more generations and the race is likely to have passed into history.

The white man also brought the intensive cultivation of sugar cane, a crop that requires sustained labor at certain stages in its development. The Kanakas could not provide this requisite. They were too few, to begin with, and they were constitutionally indisposed to this kind of work. Consequently the planters imported large numbers of Chinese, Japanese and Koreans from Asia, and of Portuguese and Porto Ricans from Europe and the West Indies. Since Hawaii was annexed to the United States there has been a large influx of Filipinos. At the present time the population of the Territory of Hawaii is about 358,000. The chief elements in it are 137,000 Japanese, 63,000 Filipinos, 25,000 Chinese, 30,000 Portuguese, 38,000 Caucasians (other than Portuguese, Spanish and Porto Ricans), 20,000 Hawaiians, 17,000 Caucasian-Hawaiians, and 11,000 Asiatic-Hawaiians. The intermarriage of these races during the past two generations has produced a mixture that would be hard to match in any other part of the world. The fruit of miscegenation has not in every instance been good.

Yet on the whole, surprisingly little crime has marred Honolulu in the past. The present outbreak is attributed by some observers to lax enforcement of law. Whatever administrative or legislative changes are necessary to clean up Hawaii and keep it safe for its own residents and for the thousands of visitors from this country who delight to spend their winters there, should be made. The responsibility to do this rests upon this country. Victims of civilization, the Hawaiians can no longer be held accountable for what transpires in a country that has been taken from them by force of numbers.

Well anyway, Japan learned about making scraps of paper of treaties by reading European literature.

U. S. Called Partner Of Nippon

By KATSUJI DEBUCHI
Japanese Ambassador to United States

The United States and Japan are partners and not rivals in the trade of the Pacific.

Economically Japan's relations with America have been growing closer year by year. Each must be one of the best customers of the other.

Perhaps it is superfluous to say that the international amity which we have at heart must be based upon a spiritual as well as an economic foundation. The great temple of peace rests upon cultural understanding as much as upon economic co-operation. Economic relations are, as a rule, governed by the law of supply and demand. In normal times they advance with the advance of living conditions.

In the other hand, cultural relations, which belong in the sphere of spirit, can be promoted only by unceasing efforts and vigilant toil. It cannot be denied that cultural interests are more enduring than economic interests as the basis of international harmony.

It is in this sense that we must endeavor to create mutual interest in arts and literature among the various peoples. I am happy to observe that the relationship between America and Japan has been for more than seventy-five years one of peace and friendliness.

Our cultural relations are even more intimate. At the very beginning of the era of Meiji, Japan followed the example of the United States in her system of public education. We invited many American educators and scientists to our shores to assist us. We sent large numbers of students to American schools and universities to seek knowledge. We were also fortunate in having the assistance of many of your able missionaries whose work meant so much to us, not only in the sphere of the church, but also in the field of education.

At the same time American lovers of the arts, of whom Fenollosa and Bigelow were the most distinguished, studied and recognized our paintings and other arts and interpreted them to the western world. They did something even more valuable in that they explained to the Japanese themselves the high qualities of their own art and thus made Japanese artists and connoisseurs realize the mission in the realm of aesthetics.

All this shows what a great debt we owe to the United States. In this connection it may not be presumptuous to say that America has also profited by the new cultural outlook which she has gained through intercourse with Japan.

The pictures presented here are not large in number but they have been well chosen under the direction of the department of education of Japan. They are the work of renowned contemporary Japanese artists.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK. — A young lady who keeps thoroughly abreast of the newest wrinkles in Manhattan customs, invited all her guests into her boudoir the other evening for a whiff of the place. The air was heavy with a fragrance which had a more delicate bouquet than any incense ever burned. The room was gently touched with a sweetness not of this earth.

The guests knitted brows and searched for the source of the aroma. They gave up.

"How on earth do you manage it?" she was asked.

"You'd never guess. I simply stuff a little bath salts into my radiator valves!"

HOP, SKIP AND JUMP

The newest profession is that of informer on jewel smuggling. Isolated individuals in the past have sought the 25 per cent reward paid for information leading to arrest of guilty parties, but now I hear there are at least a score who haunt the ocean liners seeking evidence, much to the joy of the government and the jewelers here.

The French Ubangi native chieftain and his three wives recently admitted to the country, after some hemming and hawing around Ellis Island, judges feminine beauty by the diameter of lower lips—which are stretched from childhood to startling dimensions, sometimes forming a ten-inch platter. The custom was adopted, I am told, 300 years ago by the Ubangis, because their women were so beautiful neighboring tribes sought to steal them, and it was thought the disfigurement would discourage attempts. Now lip-enlarging is considered necessary to loveliness.

Knowledge that the port authority is going to fit a cafeteria into observations percolates atop the George Washington span detracts, for no good reason, from the walloping bridge used to give me, seen against a winter dusk horizon.

Tin Pan alibi births far fewer of the gilded plutocrats known a few years back. Time was when a hit song topped a million copies sold, and easily. "Good Night, Sweetheart," unquestionably the most successful composition of the past few years, recently made the 100,000 grade. Radio is blamed for the slacker sales. But it's all very confusing, since songs plugged over the air usually pick up in sales thereafter.

WHAT FEW NEW YORKERS (OR TOURISTS) KNOW

That blues shouters are so much the rage in Paris that obscure little bars out in the provinces now employ East Indians and Moroccan natives who don't know what it's all about but look the part to entertain guests.

That Park avenue gourmets now send housemen to Bleeker street and the lower East Side to buy yellow Barbary figs, pomegranates, mangoes, little gourd-shaped "zucchini" and red fava beans.

There are approximately 1,923 species of lizards which inhabit all parts of the world except the cold temperate and frigid zones.

CHICAGO WELL EQUIPPED TO HANDLE CONVENTIONS OF BOTH MAJOR PARTIES

WASHINGTON. — Chicago, after all, logically is the best place in the United States for national conventions.

Even New York is no better equipped to take care of the crowds and no other city is nearly so well equipped. On an average it is the most convenient point in the country for all the delegates to get to. And it is representative of more kinds of Americanism than any population center elsewhere in the land.

Embassies from the lakeside metropolis at the Republican and Democratic national committees' respective meetings in Washington frankly were eager for the Jeffersonian gathering starting June 21, than for the G. O. P. event scheduled to begin June 14.

It is true, they admitted, that the G. O. P. performance undoubtedly will be a stem-winder, should a really resolute fight develop to prevent President Hoover's renomination, but this they did not regard as likely enough to merit serious consideration. On the opposite hand, the Democrats are relied on to furnish at least a four or five-day spectacular performance.

Hence the willingness of Chicago business men to put up $200,000 to clinch the Democratic blow-out, in comparison with the $150,000 which sufficed to secure the Republicans'—though the latter were considerably mortified when they learned

Live Your Own Life? Just Try It!

When One You Love Is in Danger

By MARSHALL MASLIN

You thought you could Live Your Own Life, did you?

But you failed, didn't you? Millions of people on this earth have had that ambition—and all the best of them failed.

Just as you did.

If you are selfish, if you are hard, if you are callous, you CAN live your own life—but it isn't much of a life that you live. It's a tight and barricaded life that's hardly worth bothering about at all.

And if you are not selfish and callous, and you try to live your own life, then the best part of you defeats your ambition.

That's true. You might as well make up your mind to it—that you CAN'T live your own life!

Why not? Well, you have no exclusive life of your own to live. The better your life is, and the happier, the less of it is yours. Every day you give part of it away and soon it is so closely interwoven with the lives of others—who love you, whom you love—that you cannot act independently.

You give part of your life to some purpose, to some cause, to some ideal, to some human being who is close to you and deeply entangled in your ways and your emotions. And after that has happened you can't do as you please without hurting someone else, without hurting your own given-away self.

It happens so slowly that sometimes you don't know about it. You have given the best part of yourself away, but you will strut and boast that you are free to LIVE YOUR OWN LIFE.

And then something happens.

One you love is struck down, sickness, suffers and may die.

You haunt a hospital. You hang around helplessly. You cannot laugh, you cannot eat, you cannot work. You are stricken, too. You want to help and your own helplessness makes you sick at heart.

..... You have given the best part of you to that beloved one who lies there suffering and you would not have it back. You are chained and the chains that bind you so close are sacred.

And you THOUGHT you were always going to Live Your Own Life?

Fortunate Fools that we are—we never, never can!

Still, there is something in psychology.

The choice of Chicago was a jab at the governor, and was so intended. Despite denials, everyone at the familiar with politics knows it.

The existence has been disclosed of a Democratic element which is hostile to him—and sufficiently powerful to have drawn first blood. It is a revelation which cannot weigh with Democrats who, though not unfriendly to the New Yorker, yet care more for party victory than for his particular personality, and who realize that party victory is jeopardized by a candidate against whom, within his own ranks, there is too much opposition.

The governor's initial defeat perhaps will prove not to have amounted to much, but it certainly has not helped him.

Budgets For The Entire Family

By MRS. MARY MORTON

In estimating your food budget when you have no previous records to go on, suppose you allow 50 cents a person a day. If you have five in the family, that makes $2.50 a day for food or $75 for a 30-day month. Add 50 cents a day for each guest. If you are a good buyer and manager you can undoubtedly keep the actual expenses sufficiently below your estimate to give you a margin for some hospitality.

It's better to allow a definite sum in the budget for hospitality, although the ideal hospitality, of course, offers the unexpected visitor or "just what the family has." In this case there will be less left over for the next day. Hence more supplies must be purchased.

In making your menus so that you can keep inside your budget, possibly you can use lower-priced foods in each group. Or you can buy in larger quantities and get reductions, or take advantage of sales.

Discourage waste of food on the plate and food whims. Get in the habit of scrutinizing labels on cans and cartons and know just what weight or measure of each article you are getting for a given amount and how far it will go. Compare prices in different stores for the same goods.

And whatever steps toward economy you take, in other respects, be sure to keep good balance among the various groups of foods, for this is health insurance, say dietitians.

What Constitutes Diet?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

During the second and especially the third year, the child's diet should increase in variety. Through the third year the plan should be to aim towards a three-meal schedule in the fourth year.

During the second year the child should get at least one and one-half pints of milk a day. Cereal (oatmeal, cornmeal, farina, cream of wheat), vegetables (spinach, carrots, peas, beans, lima beans, tomatoes, cabbage and potatoes), eggs (soft boiled, the whole egg after fifteen months, the yolk before, once a day), meats (scraped very fine, boiled, broiled or roasted), fruits (orange juice and stewed fruit), and desserts in the form of simple custards and puddings, are all allowable during the second year.

Healthy children should weigh about 35 pounds at three years. They need about 40 calories a pound a day. At least a tenth of these should be in protein form.

Milk is the staple of the three-year-old's diet. It contains plenty of calcium which is needed for the growing bones. It also contains vitamins A, B and D, as well as sugar, in easily available form.

From a pint to a quart a day is the proper allowance. It is not necessary that all this be given to the child to be drunk straight. Some of the cream should be used on the cereal. Some in a soup, some as a dessert, some as bread and milk, some as custard, or junket.

Starting with breakfast, a well cooked cereal is a regular item. During the second year the cereal should be strained, but this is not essential in the third year. Cream may be used, but not sugar. Sugar dulls the appetite for other and more valuable foods. The longer a knowledge of the taste of sugar is kept from a child the better. Says Dr. Rose: "Spinach is one of the popular vegetables in the nursery, but it would never be if a lollipop came first."

The teeth should be developed by using a dry, hard bread.

Fruits and vegetables, especially green vegetables, are to be added generously. If the digestion cannot stand the fibers of fruits, the juice alone may be given. But most children can take baked apple or banana or pear when the cooking has softened them.

Eggs, and especially the yolk, with its high iron and mineral and vitamin content.

A day's schedule is as follows:

Breakfast: Apple sauce, cereal with cream, cup milk, slice of hard bread.

Mid-morning: A teaspoon of cod liver oil in a tablespoon of orange juice.

Dinner: Soft egg, mashed potato, green vegetable, such as spinach or peas, a cup of milk, buttered hard bread, and dessert (custard or bread pudding).

Mid-afternoon: Cup milk and slice of bread and butter.

Supper: Milk toast and prune whip.

Editor's Note: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O. The pamphlets are: "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Girl Wants To "Date"

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

No matter how carefully a girl makes her choice of a husband, she is sure some time in her marital life to feel sure she couldn't have made a worse choice.

This feeling will be quite irrespective of how much she loves her man. The thought may be a transient one, but it's certain to come, for human nature is what it is, and no two people can live together for years and years and always be in accord.

If, however, the girl has had some experience with men, has "gone around a bit" before she marries, she is less apt to be dissatisfied with her choice—or at least, to feel that she might have done better. She can't plead inexperience for marrying the man she did, anyhow.

UNDECEDED B. I think it would be wise to confide your feeling to your boy friend and ask him whether he would be willing for you to accept dates with other boys, especially as you are together so little.

The majority of persons have occasional feelings of uncertainty concerning the one they are planning to marry. They wonder whether their choice is wise, whether love is blinding them to faults, and they are assailed with misgivings. That is natural.

You are sure you love this boy, you are congenial and never quarrel, you say. Well, then, you can be reasonably sure that you will be happy together. I don't imagine the difference in your social status would matter, if it is not a very great difference.

Why not try going out with others for the few months intervening before your graduation, promising that you will let your engagement be announced then if you are of the same mind as now?

G. A. C.: I wish you could go away from home for a time and have a good time without any responsibility. G. A. C., and then see how you feel about marrying this man. It seems to me that you are merely tired of so much work and responsibility and so think you would like to marry—just because any kind of a change would look good to you. Could you get away, say, for the spring vacation, when the others could keep house?

I think, too, that you should wait to marry, if possible, until your sister has finished high school. You are plenty young enough to do that. Could she finish if you marry before her graduation? Seems to me, too, from your letter, that this man wants a housekeeper more than anything else. You can't blame him for that, but it seems like a dreary prospect for a young girl to marry a man who wants her more for her accomplishments of cooking and cleaning than because he loves her and wants her companionship. Some day you may regret not waiting for some one your own age who will love you dearly and will want you whether you can cook or not.

I have no doubt that you could make the little girl love you. It may be that you can find your best happiness by marrying this man who you say is well able to take care of you; but I want you to think about the things I have said before you make up your mind.

BROWN EYES: Wait until your twenty-first birthday, and then you can marry, whether your father objects or not. No, your father couldn't put you in a reform school at your age, and just for having a boy friend.

B. B.: No harm in asking the boy friend to write. Sorry if I have not answered your other letters. There are so many I have to answer first that I consider most urgent.

YVONNE: No, girls don't have to kiss fellows at parties if they don't want to—or at any other time or place.

Exercises Simple But Effective

By GLADYS GLAD

The stretching exercises about which I told you in yesterday's article are probably the simplest exercises ever devised. In fact, they're so simple that I'm afraid you'll be inclined to seriously doubt their effectiveness, and will disregard them. Which is just what I'm hoping you won't do.

In the first exercise, stand with feet together, head held as far back as possible. Tense your arm muscles. Raise your arms at the sides at shoulder level. Imagine articles just beyond reach of your fingertips, and try to reach them. Relax, dropping your arms. Then take a deep breath, hold it, and exhale it slowly.

In the second exercise, stand with your

Who said they never come back? An exception to this popular theory is the case of Xenia Central High, four-time Miami Valley League champion, which absolutely declines to be counted out of the 1932 league race.

Undaunted by the fact their twenty-game winning streak and immaculate league record had been smashed by Sidney, the Bucs promptly inaugurated what may be another victory string at Troy's expense Friday night. Never was a one-point victory more impressive. By rights Xenia should have won by ten to fifteen points, and probably would had the combination that started the game been kept intact to the finish.

Before the game, Coach Bill Howell of Troy had jokingly pleaded with Coach "Pinky" Wilson not to "run up the score" on his team. The Bucs were doing just that and were leading by thirteen points, 18 to 5, in the second period, when "Pinky" took out his regulars. Possibly he took pity on the Trojans. This move nearly proved fatal, and "Pinky" told Howell after it was all over that never again would he be moved by sympathy for a Troy team that was apparently getting a terrible beating.

Referee Wren from Lima, who officiated the game, is new in these parts, but he proved a thoroughly capable official. He was not the least bit squeamish about calling personal fouls. In fact he called twenty-eight of them, of which eighteen were on Xenia and only ten on Troy. Wren says he calls them as he sees them, no matter how many or on what team. He certainly lived up to this policy. The Lima official has the right idea because he kept the contest well in hand at all times—and the fans liked it.

Xenia has two games on its program this week-end, the first another Miami Valley League engagement. Both contests will be played away from home. The Bucs will tackle Miamisburg in what should be another warm argument Friday night, and on Saturday night they will visit Eaton.

Fred Ervin, an enthusiastic softball fan, observed that a lot of good weather for playing softball games has been going to waste this "winter."

Come to think of it, that would have been a monstrous miscarriage of justice if the Buccaneers had lost that Troy game, after once boasting a thirteen-point lead. But all's well that ends well, and after all the one-point margin looked every bit as big.

The repartee between the rival spokesmen for the Lang Chevrolet Falcons and the Jamestown Merchants goes merrily on. To Marvin Putnam's response to "Buck" Ferguson's challenge for a game, that the Falcons are willing to play the Merchants here anytime, providing the Merchants put up a guarantee to cover any financial deficit, Ferguson retorts that if Langs can't draw more than thirty-seven cash customers to a game, how do they expect his team to induce the fans to storm the portals of Central gym in large numbers. It begins to look like the two teams are trying to arrange a debate instead of a basketball contest.

Unable to overcome a nine-point disadvantage in the first period, Bath Twp. High School's cage quintet lost to Stivers High Reserves, 35 to 24, in one of the feature contests of the Stivers basketball carnival at the Dayton fairgrounds coliseum Saturday night.

THREE LOOP GAMES ARE BOOKED FOR FRIDAY NIGHT

Another full program of three contests, this time with Dayton Fairview idle, will make up the Miami Valley League basketball card Friday night.

Xenia Central, victor over Troy by one point, 27 to 26, last week-end, will visit Miamisburg to engage the Burger quintet, which continued undefeated in league competition by smothering Piqua, 24 to 17, for its second straight victory.

Greenville, having triumphed over Dayton Fairview, 15 to 12 for its first league win, will clash with Piqua on the latter's floor.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

Who said they never come back? An exception to this popular theory is the case of Xenia Central High, four-time Miami Valley League champion, which absolutely declines to be counted out of the 1932 league race.

Undaunted by the fact their twenty-game winning streak and immaculate league record had been smashed by Sidney, the Bucs promptly inaugurated what may be another victory string at Troy's expense Friday night. Never was a one-point victory more impressive. By rights Xenia should have won by ten to fifteen points, and probably would had the combination that started the game been kept intact to the finish.

Before the game, Coach Bill Howell of Troy had jokingly pleaded with Coach "Pinkie" Wilson not to "run up the score" on his team. The Bucs were doing just that and were leading by fifteen points, 15 to 5, in the second period, when "Pinkie" took out his regulars. Possibly he took pity on the Trojans. This move nearly proved fatal, and "Pinkie" told Howell after it was all over that never again would he be moved by sympathy for a Troy team that was apparently getting a terrible beating.

Referee Wren from Lima, who officiated the game, is new in these parts, but he proved a thoroughly capable official. He was not the least bit squeamish about calling personal fouls. In fact he called twenty-eight of them, of which eighteen were on Xenia and only ten on Troy. Wren says he calls them as he sees them, no matter how many or on what team. He certainly lived up to this policy. The Lima official has the right idea because he kept the contest well in hand at all times—and the fans liked it.

Xenia has two games on its program this week-end, the first an other Miami Valley League engagement. Both contests will be played away from home. The Bucs will tackle Miamisburg in what should be another warm argument Friday night, and on Saturday night they will visit Eaton.

Fred Ervin, an enthusiastic softball fan, observed that a lot of good weather for playing softball games has been going to waste this "winter."

Come to think of it, that would have been a monstrous miscarriage of justice if the Buccaneers had lost that Troy game, after once boasting a thirteen-point lead. But all's well that ends well, and after all the one-point margin looked every bit as big.

The repartee between the rival spokesmen for the Lang Chevrolet Falcons and the Jamestown Merchants goes merrily on. To Marvin Putnam's response to "Buck" Ferguson's challenge for a game, that the Falcons are willing to play the Merchants here anytime, providing the Merchants put up a guarantee to cover any financial deficit, Ferguson retorts that if Langs can't draw more than thirty-seven cash customers to a game, how do they expect their team to induce the fans to storm the portals of Central gym in large numbers. It begins to look like the two teams are trying to arrange a debate instead of a basketball contest.

BATH HIGH QUINSET BEATEN BY STIVERS RESERVES 35 TO 24

Early Lead Enables
Orange To Subdue
Greene Countians

Unable to overcome a nine-point disadvantage in the first period, Bath Twp. High School's cage quintet lost to Stivers High Reserves, 35 to 24, in one of the feature contests of the Stivers basketball carnival at the Dayton fairgrounds coliseum Saturday night.

The Orange Crusher built up a 10 to 1 lead in the first quarter, then coasted to an easy victory. Bath played the remaining three periods on about even terms, however. Stivers reserves led at the half, 16 to 8, and at the end of the half, 22 to 14.

Linebaugh, Bath center, tallied ten points. Lineups:

THREE LOOP GAMES ARE BOOKED FOR FRIDAY NIGHT

Another full program of three contests, this time with Dayton Fairview idle, will make up the Miami Valley League basketball card Friday night.

HOME TEAMS DEFEAT WAYNESVILLE HIGH

O. S. and S. O. Home first, second and junior basketball teams were each victorious in a basketball carnival staged on the Home armory floor Saturday night with Waynesville High quintets providing the opposition in return games.

The cadet "varsity" five avenged an early season defeat by triumphing over Waynesville, 18 to 14, in the headliner contest on the program. Preliminary games resulted in a 24 to 13 victory for the Home reserves, and a 16 to 11 triumph for the Home juniors.

In each of the games the cadet court combinations had the situations so well in hand that Coach Neff was enabled to make frequent substitutions in the lineups.

Sullivan in His Prime

JOHN LAWRENCE SULLIVAN, first great heavyweight champion of the world and founder of the present dynasty of ring kings, was born in Roxbury, Mass., Oct. 15, 1857. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sullivan, were emigrants from County Kerry, Ireland. Michael Sullivan, a mason, was a small man, but very powerful. Mrs. Sullivan, however, was tall and strong. John inherited their sturdiness.

SPRING HILL TEAMS CONTINUE VICTORY MARCH IN GRADE LOOP

Showing no partiality, Spring Hill's fourth, fifth and sixth grade quintets defeated their McKinley "B" opponents just as they had beaten their McKinley "A" opponents a week ago, Saturday morning at Central High gym in the second round of play in the annual Intra-City Grade School League.

Spring Hill fourth graders beat McKinley 4A by a score of 15 to 1, with Heaton scoring twelve points for the winners and Mason tallying the losing quintet's only point.

In the second game on the program, Spring Hill fifth grade vanquished McKinley 5B, the score being 14 to 2. Bottorff contributed eight points for the Hill team.

Richardson played well for McKinley. The third contest resulted in a 52 to 6 triumph for the champion Spring Hill sixth grade over McKinley 6B. Fuller went on a scoring spree and tallied twenty-eight points, followed by Heaton with twelve. Ringer and Acton were outstanding for the losers.

The third round of play next Saturday morning at Central gym will find the victorious Spring Hill teams idle, thus permitting the McKinley "A" and "B" teams to settle the question of their superiority. The first game starts at 9 a. m.

CEDARVILLE HIGH VICTOR OVER MT. STERLING FIVE SATURDAY

Thanks to an eight-point lead acquired during the first half, Cedarville High School's basketball quintet vanquished Mt. Sterling cagers, 22 to 19 on the latter school's floor Saturday night. Cedarville basketballers rolled up a margin of 17 to 9 in the first two periods, and this advantage withstood a determined comeback on the part of Mt. Sterling in the last half.

Waddie, forward, tallied eleven points for Coach Paul Orr's team, and Pollock, a guard, was high scorer for Mt. Sterling with nine points.

Cedarville boys' and girls' teams will engage London High teams in return games at Cedarville Friday night this week, Cedarville cagers are also looking forward to their long awaited contest with Ross Valley High's unbeaten quintet on the Cedarville floor Thursday night, January 28. Lineups:

John L. Winning Title

SULLIVAN reigned for 10 years as champion of the world. His knockout of Paddy Ryan, pictured above, in Mississippi City, Miss., Feb. 7, 1882, won him the heavyweight crown which he lost to James J. Corbett in New Orleans, La., Sept. 7, 1892. His popularity, as champion, was even greater than that of Jack Dempsey, the "John L." of the last decade. Sullivan was the idol of most men and all boys.

Bowling

The heretofore invincible Red Wings, leaders of the Recreation League, dropped three games in a match with the Famous Aulos last week, but their lead still amounts to nine full games since the second-place Schmidt Oil Co. lost two out of three to the Krippendorf Shoes. WHEN JOHN L. was born Roxbury was still a separate community. When he was nine years old it was annexed by Boston. However, Boston claimed him for its own and he looked upon the Massachusetts metropolis as his home town. As the "Boston Strong Boy" he was immensely popular in the old town. RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION, INC.

READ THIS FIRST:
Marcia Moyer is a very beautiful young girl demonstrator of beauty products, traveling over the country. In her small home city she has left her family and Ted Stanton, a young mechanic who is in love with her. But she wants to see the world and find romance. After she leaves Mitchellfield, a mysterious aviator lands there, falls in love with her sister, Vivian, and engages Ted for his mechanic. After many regular visits, he fails to appear or send word, and Vivian is greatly grieved. Meanwhile, on the train to Detroit, Marcia meets a handsome and distinguished secret service official who is attracted to her and introduces her to his wealthy friends, the Bothwells. They are invited to a party where the girls wear pajamas, so she selects a beautiful pair for the occasion and enjoys the unique party of human backgammon and swimming in the flood-lighted garden pool.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)
CHAPTER 25
KERRY WELLAND was especially attentive, and cut in on her dances with no attempt to cancel his purpose. "Tell me, where have you been keeping yourself all the time?" he demanded with his lips close to her ear.

She laughed lightly. "Oh, you wouldn't know where it is if I told you."

"Well, the important thing is that you are here, now, anyway. Did Gilmore bring you?"

"He did."

"Is there a possibility that I may take you home?"

"Not a chance."

"Do you happen to belong to him—engaged?"

"Oh, no."

Well, then there is always a chance. But if I can't drive you home tonight, how about a date of our own?"

"I am only in the city for another week."

"That makes it all the more important that we lose no more time, then. Please let me see you."

"What would be the use?"

"How can we know until we get acquainted?" he smiled encouragement.

Marcia did not know who he might be, but he was tall and blonde and singularly attractive, and his presence here at the Bothwells was his reference. But she was not particularly interested in him. She had noticed, also, that he drank rather too much. Perhaps his attentions to her were prompted by his influence. "I don't think it would be worth your while," she insisted, and was relieved when Turner cut in on the dance.

"Two can play at the same game, can't they?" he smiled.

"No rules against it. I'm rather glad you did."

"Don't you like him?"

"I've known a lot of people I could like better, I think."

"Are you aware of whom you speak?"

"Only that his name is Kerry Welland, and he rather loves himself."

"Son of the automobile magnate. President of the Wellcar Company."

"Really?"

"That's right! See what you've done. Didn't you give him the least encouragement?"

"I'm afraid I didn't," she smiled up into Turner's face as if he were a very old friend. It seemed incredible that she had known him only a week. Queer, how some people just fitted into your life so naturally that they seemed always to have been there. That was the way she felt about Turner Gilmore, but she was sure that there was no place like that for Kerry Welland.

"Even since you have told me how important he is, I'm sorry, though."

His arm drew her closer, suddenly. "It is possible that you still like me better?"

"Oh, very much."

Jean Bothwell asked them to join a yacht party on the following day, but Turner explained that they had made other plans.

"Should you rather go with the party?" he referred the decision to Marcia.

"I'd love to be with you," she told Jean, "but Turner had made his plans, so I'll go with him."

"Of course, I don't blame you in the least," Jean approved, and there was just a shade of wistfulness in her voice and expression, which made Marcia wonder again why Turner had not preferred Jean to a life of loneliness, sometime ago.

"Were you really sincere about preferring my motor trip to the yacht party?" he asked when they had started back to town.

"Why do you doubt me?" Marcia asked.

"I don't. I just doubt my own senses. Marcia, I wonder if you know what you have done to me?"

"Nothing unkind, I hope." She waited anxiously.

"Not at all. But you have upset my whole life. I'm like a fellow who was perched on a ladder of tranquil existence which he had climbed by a perilous rung at a time and thought he was safely content. Then someone upsets the ladder, and he picks himself up, stunned and bewildered, and finds that he has to start all over again."

"I don't. I just doubt my own senses. Marcia, I wonder if you know what you have done to me?"

He slowed the car to a stop at the curb of the deserted boulevard, and turned to face her. Suddenly, she was in his arms and his lips were

FORMER MEMBER OF LABOR GOVERNMENT SPEAKS AT ANTIOCH

Rennie Smith, former member of the British Labor Parliament, who is making a lecture tour of the United States under the auspices of the Institute of International Education, discussed economic and political conditions in Great Britain before the students and faculty of Antioch College Friday.

"The greatest reforms needed today are the clearing away of the complication of debts and reparations and the establishment of an international system of currency and credit, giving a reliable unit of value on which the business of the world can be conducted," Mr. Smith declared. "We cannot find a solution of the economic problems of the world through talking about the bad faith of Europeans or the altruism of Americans. It is a business proposition. If we get a settlement of debts and establish a world system of credit and trading, it will be because England and America together have found a policy whereby they, and other nations, may eliminate the present economic disorder and distress and reap the reasonable rewards of two centuries of magnificent inventive achievement. It is an international calamity that world statesmanship did not formulate a radical and constructive policy before Germany repudiated her debts."

In reviewing economic and political conditions in Great Britain, the speaker pointed out, "The break in the economic balance of the world which followed the outbreak in American prosperity of October, 1929, brought the National party into power in England, replacing the Labor party which had held control although it was in the minority in Parliament. This change, which was supported by two-thirds of the people of Britain, reduced the number of Labor members in the House of Commons from 290 in a total of 615 to less than fifty members. Now 94 per cent of the members of Parliament are Conservatives, and the policies of the government will be in accordance with their views.

The efforts of the National government now in power will be directed toward converting England into a tariff country, according to Mr. Smith. "The free trade epoch of England is at an end. In 1925 an international conference of banks agreed that more free trade was necessary to preserve relative prosperity in the world. Since then nothing has been done. Great Britain has been standing in the boxing ring of commerce wearing free trade gloves and trying to convince other countries to do the same. In 1932 she will wear tariff gloves that deliver as much tariff punch and pugnacity as any nation in the world. We have taken a leaf from America's book in this matter. However, the hope in England is that all nations will learn together that free trade is the better way."

In discussing economic conditions of his country, the speaker remarked, "Some of the difficulties Great Britain has experienced are evidenced by the facts that the pound was taken off the gold standard and that the number of unemployed among our population of forty millions has increased from one million in 1929 to two and three quarters of millions at present. This is in the same proportion as nine million unemployed would be to total population in the United States. In addition, according to last April's estimate, the budget of the British government will not balance this March, when the yearly closing is made. This is significant since in previous years England has been able consistently to balance her budget—as few other countries have done."

Mr. Smith, author of "General Disarmament or War," visited Antioch in the course of a lecture tour of the United States, on which he is discussing the work and future of the British Labor party, under the auspices of the Institute of International Education.

FARMER SERIOUSLY INJURED IN FOUR-CAR ACCIDENT SATURDAY

Sustaining serious injuries when struck by one auto and hurled into the path of another as he was directing vehicular traffic at the scene of an auto accident near his home Saturday night, William Sowers, 56, of Beattytown on the Springfield-Xenia Pike, is confined in City Hospital at Springfield. His condition was pronounced "fair" Sunday night by hospital attendants.

Sowers, an examination indicated, received a fractured pelvis and severe lacerations about the head and body.

The Beattytown man was giving assistance at the scene of an accident in which an auto driven by William G. Martin, Clifton Pike, also occupied by Mrs. Martin and two nephews, smashed into the rear of a truck parked along the east side of the highway.

Witnesses of the mishap related that Sowers had stationed himself north of the wreckage to direct southbound traffic. An auto operated by Lewis Ward, colored, Selma, approaching from the south, swerved to the west side of the pike to avoid the parked truck on the east side.

In an effort to escape being trapped between the oncoming auto and the truck, Sowers was reported to have run toward the side of the road, but in so doing was hit by Ward's machine and tossed across the highway directly in the path of a county car driven by Robert Cartmell, special deputy sheriff who, with his father, Sheriff C. W. Cartmell, of Clark County, had just arrived on the scene to investigate the Martin mishap.

The driver of the truck, Harry E. Mouser, Xenia, had stopped the truck by the side of the road to change a tire, he reported. Mouser, who said the tail light on his truck was burning, told Sheriff Cartmell that he was waiting for a tire being dispatched to him from Xenia on a Springfield-Xenia traction car. The Xenia trucker said he had walked over to a point where the interurban car stops, in order to get the tire, and that he was unaware of the accident until, upon returning, he found autos lined up behind the truck.

Receiving cuts and body bruises in the accident, Mr. and Mrs. Martin were taken to Yellow Springs for treatment, and later were removed home.

Arrested by the Clark County sheriff, Ward and three other occupants of his car, Theodore R. McFadden, 5 Baker Ave., Springfield; Homer Ward, brother of the driver, and Albert E. Salle, 1024 Summer St., Springfield, were lodged in jail, pending an investigation.

WOMAN SERIOUSLY INJURED WHEN HIT BY OFFICER'S CAR

Mrs. Letitia Brown, 75, E. Second St., suffered a fracture of the left leg just below the knee and a scalp wound when struck by an auto driven by Patrolman Stanley L. Nickel at Detroit and Second Sts., at 6:45 p. m. Saturday.

The officer, who was off duty and was driving south on Detroit St., reported that the woman was crossing from the west to the east side of Detroit St. against the traffic light, in a pouring rain.

Becoming confused when she reached the middle of the street, and hesitating as to which way to turn, she was knocked down when hit by the left front fender of the car.

Patrolman Nickel said the windshield and windows of his auto were steamed and that he did not see the woman until he was about ten feet from her and it was too late to avoid the accident.

The officer rushed the injured woman to McClellan Hospital, where she was reported in an improved condition Monday.

FORMER MEMBER OF LABOR GOVERNMENT SPEAKS AT ANTIOCH

Rennie Smith, former member of the British Labor Parliament, who is making a lecture tour of the United States under the auspices of the Institute of International Education, discussed economic and political conditions in Great Britain before the students and faculty of Antioch College Friday.

"The greatest reforms needed today are the clearing away of the complication of debts and reparations and the establishment of an international system of currency and credit, giving a reliable unit of value on which the business of the world can be conducted," Mr. Smith declared. "We cannot find a solution of the economic problems of the world through talking about the bad faith of Europeans or the altruism of Americans. It is a business proposition. If we get a settlement of debts and establish a world system of credit and trading, it will be because England and America together have found a policy whereby they, and other nations, may eliminate the present economic disorder and distress and reap the reasonable rewards of two centuries of magnificent inventive achievement. It is an international calamity that world statesmanship did not formulate a radical and constructive policy before Germany repudiated her debts."

In reviewing economic and political conditions in Great Britain, the speaker pointed out, "The break in the economic balance of the world which followed the break in American prosperity of October, 1929, brought the National party into power in England, replacing the Labor party which had held control although it was in the minority in Parliament. This change, which was supported by two-thirds of the people of Britain, reduced the number of Labor members in the House of Commons from 290 in a total of 615 to less than fifty members. Ninety per cent of the members of Parliament are Conservatives, and the policies of the government will be in accordance with their views."

The efforts of the National government now in power will be directed toward converting England into a tariff country, according to Mr. Smith. "The free trade epoch of England is at an end. In 1925 an international conference of banks agreed that more free trade was necessary to preserve relative prosperity in the world. Since then nothing has been done. Great Britain has been standing in the boxing ring of commerce wearing free trade gloves and trying to convince other countries to do the same. In 1932 she will wear tariff gloves that deliver as much tariff punch and pugnacity as any nation in the world. We have taken a leaf from America's book in this matter. However, the hope in England is that all nations will learn together that free trade is the better way."

In discussing economic conditions of his country, Mr. Smith remarked, "Some of the difficulties Great Britain has experienced are evidenced by the facts that the pound was taken off the gold standard and that the number of unemployed among our population of forty millions has increased from one million in 1929 to two and three quarter millions at present. This is in the same proportion as nine million unemployed would be to total population in the United States. In addition, according to last April's estimate, the budget of the British government will not balance this March, when the yearly closing is made. This is significant since in previous years England has been able consistently to balance her budget—as few other countries have done."

Mr. Smith, author of "General Disarmament or War," visited Antioch in the course of a lecture tour of the United States, on which he is discussing the work and future of the British Labor party, under the auspices of the Institute of International Education.

WEDNESDAY LAST DOG LICENSE DAY

Dog owners were reminded Monday by County Auditor James J. Curlett that Wednesday is the last day for procuring 1932 licenses for their pets if they wish to avoid payment of an extra dollar imposed for delinquency.

Sale of dog licenses is running about 200 short of last year, the auditor reported. About 900 have been sold at the auditor's office and it is estimated that between 500 and 600 more tags have been sold by various registrars over the county.

After the deadline date Wednesday, Alonzo Edwards, county dog warden, will be authorized by County Commissioners to make a county-wide survey and ascertain if all dogs are properly licensed for this year.

Now, it is no secret that the political advice given to the White among folk who are brought into contact with him, a better liked functionary in Washington. He is as approachable, amiable, accommodating an official as it is possible to imagine. The newspapers can roast him, congressmen bewail him out on Capitol Hill, deficits pile up, elections go wrong—he's as affable and undisturbed as ever.

It seems incredible that he can be anything but a poor politician, considering how his advice (if he gives it) turns out—but his nerve is wonderful.

Small Flowers

That's one of the biggest style hits of the season—little bits of flowers in deep pastel colors, scattered all over a contrasting background.

Dark Background

Dark backgrounds are the smartest for this mid-season's wear, and they look just right under your winter coat. But of course if you like to be colorful—there are gay backgrounds, too.
